

A MAD DOG ENTERS

And the Congregation of Dr. J. Sumner Stone's Church Leaves.

DOGGY CLIMBS THE PULPIT STAIRS

At the Asbury M. E. Church and the Pastor Hastily Dismisses the Worshipers—Next the Dog Spreads Terror Through Washington Square and Disperses a Military Company. Finally Kicked and Shot to Death.

A little brown Scotch terrier dispersed the congregation at Dr. J. Sumner Stone's church in New York Sunday. Dr. Stone is well known in Wheeling, and his friends here will be pleased to note that his presence of mind averted a panic and perhaps saved many of his people from hydrophobia. The dog was mad and frothing at the mouth. The New York Herald tells the story as follows:

The little brown beaver came into the square from Fourth street shortly before five o'clock. From the collar on its neck dangled an end of a small chain, which had been broken. At its heels was a crowd of small boys, yelling like a troop of Comanches. They were throwing sticks and stones at their prey.

Evidently frightened almost to death, its tongue protruding from its mouth and flecks of foam dropping from the diminutive jaws, the poor little animal sought eagerly for a haven of refuge. Its well groomed coat and tiny chain showed that it had been somebody's pet. It paused an instant and looked back wearily at its pursuers. It could find no pity there.

At the moment the dog was directly in front of the Asbury Methodist Episcopal church. Services were being held inside and the church portals were invitingly open. It was an agreeable prospect and promised rest at least, so the dog must have thought for without another glance behind it ran up the steps and stood at the head of one of the side aisles. Not one of the dog's cruel pursuers had dared to follow it into the sanctuary.

Once inside the poor brute stood irresolute. None had noticed its advent. In the pulpit were the pastor of the church, the Rev. Dr. J. S. Jones, and Miss Wray, formerly known as Adjutant Wray when she was with the Salvation Army. Miss Wray was addressing the congregation, which filled the church fairly well. Dr. Stone sat just back of her. He had heard the noises in the street and was speculating on their cause when he heard a yelp at the door of the pulpit.

Looking over he saw the little Scotch terrier which had run up the steps in search of protection. The dog was frothing at the mouth and kept trying to leap over the pulpit door.

By this time the congregation had seen the terrier and low cries of "Mad dog!" were heard here and there. Women began to be excited and showed a disposition to climb on the seats of the pews. Children began to cry, and even the men looked anxiously toward the doors. Seeing the agitation of those in the church Mr. Stone announced from the pulpit that those present who wished to do so could leave the church—and, of course, incidentally, the dog. He did not say that, though.

The minister's congregation had never been more in accord with him before and there was a general rush for the doors, though there was no marked disorder. Once on the outside the worshippers hid in an adjoining drug store and other means of vantage to be out of the way when the dog came forth. When all but a venturesome few had left the church two men approached the dog, one of whom placed a tall hat over its head while the other seized it just back of the neck, and carrying it rapidly to the door, dropped it upon the sidewalk. The poor dog had found no rest even in the sanctuary, and was at once beset by a howling mob, even larger than before.

This time the dog crossed the street and ran down the main part of Washington square. His advent, followed by the yelling crowd, created the greatest consternation. Old tramps and other idlers tumbled over the backs of the benches in terror. Nursemaids screamed and, forgetful of their charges, jumped on the seats vacated by the men. Opposite the Garibaldi monument there was a company of Italian soldiers passing. At the sight of the dog and the mob they broke ranks and fled precipitately, while Garibaldi looked down in sorrow at the flight of his gayly bedecked countrymen.

Meantime, the little brown dog kept on his way, turning neither to right nor left. He growled not, neither did he bite. He just wanted to be let alone and go home. But as he crossed the main street leading through the park he staggered a little. The foam upon his lips had a reddish tinge now. Before the brown eyes, which not long since had looked lovingly into those of master or a mistress, black specks were floating.

The little Scotch terrier's race was nearly run. When he got across the road near a clump of trees the crowd was hemming him in on every side, and the poor brute was moving so slowly that when a big man kicked him with his heavy boot, it struck him squarely and knocked him over weak and moaning. Then the big man picked up the little dog, dropped him into a large box used as a receptacle for dead leaves, and shut down the cover.

Here Policeman James F. Thompson, of the Mercer street police station, came through the crowd, and lifting the cover shot the dog twice. After the second shot the little terrier gave up the ghost, doubtless feeling that this is a very cold world, and that churches are not what they are cracked up to be.

A NEW CABBAGE INSECT

Making its Appearance in West Virginia. Was Very Destructive to Cabbage Plants Along the Ohio River last Spring and Summer—An Account of the Insect and Methods of Dealing with it.

While on a tour of investigation last July through the river counties from Hancock to Wayne, I found that some kind of an insect had been causing great loss to the cabbage growers of that region, and as it was reported to be something new it claimed considerable of my attention. The trouble was found to be caused by the cabbage maggot, an insect which has been introduced into this country from Europe. It first made its appearance in New York in 1859, and seems to have spread from that point, and is just beginning to attract attention here.

Near Wellsburg, in Brooke county, and Guyandotte, in Cabell, great loss had been sustained by growers from its ravages. A lady market gardener near Guyandotte said she had lost 1,400 plants from its attack.

The illustrations show the maggot, Fig. a, the pupa, Fig. b, and the perfect insect, Fig. c. The lines represent the natural length of the forms.

The fly, which resembles the house fly somewhat, makes its appearance early in the spring and deposits its eggs near the roots of cabbage plants in the soil or in the field. The eggs soon hatch into maggots which work their way down into the ground and feed on the outer surface of bark, and as they grow older enter the stalk itself. The first attack causes the plant to have a sickly appearance, and the plant finally dies. It is said that they sometimes cause an abnormal growth like club root when their attack is not sufficient to kill the plant.

The maggots become full grown in about two or three weeks, when they change into the pupa form, from which the perfect fly emerges a few days later. There seems to be three or four broods of this insect in one season, and it is supposed that they pass the winter in all stages, i. e., larva, pupa and perfect insect.

This insect is often quite a difficult one to deal with, and it is only by prompt and persistent effort that it can be controlled. The best known methods are:

First—Preventive—Tobacco dust or other forms of tobacco applied freely among the plants in the bed and around those in the field is probably one of the best methods to prevent egg deposits. Ashes placed in the furrow or hill just prior to setting plants would also tend to drive the flies or maggots away. A top dressing of kainit and other potash fertilizers would have a good effect, and lime, ashes, and salt placed around the plants is also recommended. Second—Remedies.—With this insect, an ounce of preventive is worth many pounds of cure, for if the plants are once attacked by maggots, it is doubtful if they will ever recover sufficiently to make a good head. However, upon the first indication of attack diluted kerosene emulsion or strong tobacco water should be poured in the soil directly around the plants. This will kill the maggots, and will prevent further attack for a time.

His Personal Experience. Hon. James W. Husted, while serving his sixth term as Speaker of the Assembly of the State of New York, writes:

"STATE OF NEW YORK, ASSEMBLY CHAMBER, ALBANY, Jan. 16, 1890."

I desire once more to bear my testimony to the value of ALCOCK'S PLEASANT PLASTERS. I have used them for twenty-five years past, and can conscientiously commend them as the best, external remedy that I have known. Years ago, when thrown from a carriage and seriously injured, I gave them a thorough trial. In a very short time the pain that I was suffering disappeared, and within a week I was entirely relieved. On another occasion, when suffering from a severe cough, which threatened pulmonary difficulties, which I was recommended to go to Florida to relieve, I determined to test the plaster again. I applied them to my chest and between the shoulder-blades, and in less than a fortnight was entirely cured. On still another occasion, when suffering from an attack of rheumatism in the shoulder to such an extent that I could scarcely raise my arm, I again resorted to the plaster, and within a very few days the rheumatism entirely disappeared. I have them constantly by me, whether at home or abroad. My family as well as myself have found them to be a sovereign remedy, both for external and internal troubles. I never had but one kidney difficulty in my life, and the application of the plaster cured me in a week. I desire, as I said before, to bear my testimony in a public way to their efficacy, and I know of no better way of doing it than by giving you my personal experience.

A YOUNG HEROINE

Shoots Gilmore, a Noted North Carolina Outlaw, Near Fayetteville.

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C., May 17.—Information has been received here of the killing of Alexander Gilmore, a notorious outlaw, in Blandon county, seventeen miles from this city. Gilmore entered the house of Rev. William Brunt, a Baptist preacher of prominence, and finding no one at home but Miss Brunt, flourished a pistol and demanded that she prepare dinner for him, which she did. After eating heartily he secured all the cooked food left, and with an oath jumped out of the window. Miss Brunt searched about and found a shot gun and fired on him, lodging thirteen bullets in his body, the wound causing death in a short time. The brave young woman is the heroine of the hour.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. The Sworn Tormentors of the Inquisition.

What cared they for the groans of the victim as he lay stretched upon the rack? Yet people whose hearts are neither as hard as the pether mill stone, nor whose fortitude is excessive, often have no pity on themselves—voluntarily incur life-long torture by neglect. Rheumatism, the most agonizing and obstinate of complaints is, perhaps, more frequently neglected in its incipient stage than any other. The preliminary twinges being set down to the credit of "a cold in the bones," which will pass away of itself. Singular story—fatal delusion! Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a potent safeguard against the terrible torments of this insidious and dangerous malady—dangerous because of its proneness to attack the heart, the seat of life. Neuritis is also effectively counteracted and relieved by the Bitters. Malaria, kidney complaint, debility, indigestion, biliousness, la grippe, loss of appetite and the inability to sleep are among the complaints amenable with this genial corrective.
